For example, your organisation's foyer probably won't need security controls. If for some reason you do keep sensitive information there, it would be worth relocating it to put the foyer out of scope. A well-defined scope ensures that every area of your organisation receives adequate attention when it comes to implementing security controls.

In addition to satisfying information security audit requirements, another benefit of defining what is in scope of the ISMS is that the implementation process will allow you to at the same time define what is out of scope. In setting these ISMS boundaries it helps everyone understand the scope. A good example of this would be a 3rd party data centre, which might store and process your valuable information. It would probably be
